The third entrant is Mark Hanna's daughter, Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCor-mick, whose kusband, Medill McCorformer United States Senator Illinois, was kin to Joseph Medill, noted Chicago editor, to whom Lincoln felt himself greatly indebted.

The primary race in which these are the chief contenders has been made the more unusual by the unaccustomed expanse of the congressional contest, which comprises the entire State. Owing both to the size of the district and the large population it centains, the vote at the polis

BERLIN—The report issued by the covernment regarding the secret exenditure by the Admiralty, amounting so it is rumored to about 30,000,000 marks, which has been kept in the dark for five years by the latter, has proved a general disappointment because it is not at all clear, omitting because it is not at all clear, omitting just those points of peculiar interest to public opinion. The present report, moreover, is deemed of little value, because it is not the original report prepared by the state commissioner, entrusted by the Government to examine the charges against the Admiralty, but is a report especially prepared for publication, and the fullest information is now being demanded.

others of an entirely speculative character.

The report, however, leaves three very important questions unanswered which are now being raised—Who was responsible for these expenses, because it is doubted if a single man was able to spend these amounts without the knowledge of others, how was it possible that the Admiralty was able to deceive the Reichstag for five years by submitting incorrect statements when its budget was discussed, and lastly why were some of the mentioned undertakings organized and supported.

the return of its railway lands and the payment of subsidies, which last year were referred to a royal commission, were reviewed by L. J. Ladner, Conservative, Vancouver South When the Province joined the Confederation, he explained, it was provided in the act of 1871 that a certain belt of land should revert to the Do-minion Government to be used in connection with the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

The idea of providing the strip of land had later been abandoned, and certain blocks were set aside for railway purposes, but the belt had not reverted to the Province. He not reverted to the Province. He urged that the findings of the commission in this respect be carried out by Parliament and that the equally important question of subsidies to the Province be considered.

the NEW WILLYS-KNIGHT

FROM its first presentation at the great Automobile Shows, the thousands who have viewed the Willys-Knight Standard Six have been unanimous in their praise of this beautiful new car. Such enthusiastic acclaim proves how widespread has been the demand for a low-priced Six powered by the patented Willys-Knight engine.

It has long been our aim to produce just such a car. But due to the greater cost of building the superior sleeve-valve motor, it is only now that we have reached our goal. The new Standard Six is the climax of fourteen years' effort - a car notable for all of Willys-Knight's quality supremacy, at the lowest price in history!

A revival of the straight-eight engine is noticeable. Many manufacturers are putting this type engine ahead of the fours and sixes and its popularity is best proved by the number of eights on the road today. Among the interested visitors to the show yesterday was Bir Harry Lauder. He was naturally curious to see what European ideas had been incorporated in the new American cars. With four-wheel brakes, balloon tires, integral bodies and chassis, and other Continental methods employed as regular equipment, he felt at home at the show.

He characterized the American policy of "equality of access for every nation to available supplies wherever they exist" as justifiable because of the action establishment of "an international control to determine the distribution and sale of oil supplies during peace

Open Door Policy

"Finally, to prevent a continua-tion of constant conflict," he said, to provide a just and generally acceptable settlement of differences which may arise, there is immediate necessity for treaty agreements, bilateral or multilateral, dealing first with the issue of 'equality of access' to supplies, the 'open door,' and, secondly, with the rights of governments to control, regulate and impose terms upon foreign enterprises exploiting oil resources within their domains.

Professor Feis expressed the opinthat no oil-possessing nation had the right to make terms that were too onerous for the rest of the world, and that no consuming country had the right to make unfair demands.

National Welfare First Henry K. Norton, secretary of the American Asiatic Society, indorsed Professor Feis' views on the ad-visability of avoiding government visability of avoiding government interference in oil disputes, but expressed the opinion that national welfare should not be overlooked.

"The participation of governments in business affairs is fraught with port and it is in accordance with both the British and American tradition to leave such affairs in the hands of business men. More Instruction in Music Stressed at Convention

PECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITO ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.-Within the next 10 years summer camps will be a part of the public school system of the country, according to H. W. Gibson of Boston, president of the Camp Directors' Association, which has just concluded its fifth annual meeting here.

The need for more instruction in music as an art and as a means of expression was stressed by Peter W. Dukeman, professor of music education of Teachers' College, Columbia University. "Music," he declared, "is one of the most important parts of camp life." Mr. Gibson was re-elected again president of the association.

Hall put its approval on many millions of bonds for matters quite unimportant to dogs. But friends of canine Chicago did not get discouraged. They went to Mayor William H. Thompson and told their tale. No money? Then we'll build it without money, was the substance of the Mayor's reply. He proposed to use labor from the city workhouse and rocks from the city quarry, said Mrs. Duane T. McNabb, an officer of the Anti-Cruelty Society. The corporation counsel found this a legal method of procedure, she said, and humane workers feel encouraged humane workers feel encouraged again. Fort William fans were keenly disappointed when their team was eliminated in the Allan Cup playdowns by the University of Manitoba. Fort William had been runnersup last year and had easily coasted through the league season.

NEW ZEALAND PLANS

AUCKLAND, New Zealand—For the forthcoming Olympic Games New Zealand has formulated a more ambitious plan than in past years. The Dominion has been represented at past games, but success has always been handicapped by lack of funds. It has been difficult for New Zealand to obtain adequate representation and secure the best results from athletes at the games in the past because there is much travelling to be done; cli-matic changes are so different, and there has never been sufficient money to insure the best assistance in train-ing. Yet with its fine record in various branches of games and athletics, New Zealand should be able to make a name for itself at the Olympic

This time the New Zealand Olympic Council proposes not only to send a stronger team than has been sent on previous occasions, but to establish a permanent fund for the endowment of the Dominion's effort at the games.
The council is appealing for £10,000 to send a team of 20 swimmers, track athletes, rowers and boxers to the games, and for £ 20,000 to form an endowment for future representation, endowment for future representation. which, it is believed, would have an excellent chance of success.

Two of the records went to University of Kansas. Heretofore, Washington held every short course record. The Kansas delegation of four men came to the meet to carry off third honors with 13 points, most of which were won by Capt. Meredith Jocelyn '28, the outstanding free-styler at the gathering. Drake, with entered, took 11 points, and Grinnell placed third in the medley relay for our points.

Captain Jocelyn won the thrilling 40-yard dash in a fast field, took a short rest, and returned to the starting place to cut 1.3s. from the 30-yard free-style mark, swimming the distance in 1m. 4s.

In the other individual events the greatest gain on standing records was made by C. M. Skinner 30, Washington, who made the 440-yard free-style

Step into the Automobile

In Port Today

This day of March, 1928, Reo announces the 1929 Flying Clouds.

Reo can give you 1929 automobiles in the heart of the 1928 season for a very, very simple reason.

Reo is an independent organization and a producer of only a moderate number of cars. Refinements, changes, new ideas can be put into and through production faster than in the huge immobile plants from which come most of America's automobiles.

Reo blue prints can materialize into Reo cars many, many months sooner than do those of other reputable automobiles.

As a result, the New Reo Flying Clouds give you today what other cars may try to give you one year from today—in 1929.

The New Flying Clouds give you today a new fleetness, for one mile or one hundred, that will still be the envy of many cars—in 1929.

The New Flying Clouds give you today the ability to sweep from zero miles per hour to what you will, faster than many cars will do - even in 1929.

The New Flying Clouds give you today the agility in traffic, and steering ease that other cars will try to develop—for 1929.

The New Flying Clouds give you today distinctive new lines, sweepingly simple lines, that some other manufacturer may imitate—by 1929.

The New Flying Clouds give you today luxurious interiors that someone else may copy—for 1929.

The New Flying Clouds give you today the riding ease that many cars will strive to have—for 1929.

The New Flying Clouds give you today the fourwheel internal expanding (not external contracting) hydraulic brakes that safety demands may force many other cars to adopt—in 1929.

These things can be yours in March, 1928, in the New Flying Clouds, for the very simple reason that Reo blue prints become Reo automobiles many months sooner than do those of other reputable cars.

Step into the 1929 automobile—the New Flying Cloud—and try it out yourself.

The interview seemed opportune. More than likely the person to be interviewed would be acarcely visible behind tidy heaps of savory sandwiches, her fingers busy with slim slices of bread, crisp lettuce leaves, pimientoes or pickles, mustard or mayonnaise, and thin titbits of what an old English waiter used to enumerate for Sunday suppers as "col' 'am, col' 'amb, col' "amb, col' man, col' man, col' "amb, col' man, col' "amb, col' man, col room and feasted her eyes on the rare old English and Dutch antiques which furnished it; and who would not forget mere hungriness in delightful surroundings, particularly when one's hostess is cordial and when one's hostess is cordial and cheerful and able to tell of sandwiches so cleverly devised, so intricately concocted that they hardly sound real? Even Lord Sandwich himself, that English originator of the American sandwich habit, could not have been more enthusiastic and certainly never dreamed of the LWENTY-SIX YEARS AGO in April -when this nation-wide retail business was founded by Mr. J. C. Penney-a trip to town meant starting before daylight and arriving back home after dark. In countless instances, the distance was too great for even the long day's trip.

Today the automobile and good roads have changed it into a pleasure spin of a few hours. The radio, the automobile and the newspaper are fast making the City and Country one and the family in the farmhouse demands the same up-to-theminute styles, the same quality and advantages of personal selection as their City Cousins.

The J.C. Penney Company Department Stores, located in nearly 1,000 cities and towns over the United States, are supplying this demand in a most satisfactory way. Fast trains, Hines Page, gave some interesting impressions of his recent visit to the United States.

Mr. Spender said he carried back with him from his American journey certain dominant impressions; he saw wealth, power, and creative energy manifesting themselves over the whole country; he saw the spirit of equality and fraternity actively at work providing the career open to talent for all classes and bringing the best brains to bear on industrial development; he saw a concerted efdevelopment; he saw a concerted effort to raise the standard of life by the perpetual creation of new wants under the stimulus of salesmanship and advertising.

Speaking of international rela-tions, he said, thinking Americans were already beginning to ask them-selves how long a policy of non-intervention and disinterestedness could be maintained by a nation which was the universal creditor and had probably greater interests in Europe than any European nation; and it was beginning to be understood that it might fall to Washing-

The failure of the Geneva Conference had undoubtedly been a serious misfortune and had produced a chill in official relations which could not be expected to pass for some little time to come. The general sentiment certainly was not anti-British. But the naval question must be taken seriously, and it was none too soon for both nations to begin thinking about new approaches to that.

Lord Reading, in his remarks preceding Mr. Spender's address, spoke of the steps which had led up to the institution of the journalistic fellowships in America and in this country. They were, he said, a very fitting tribute to the memory of that great American, Walter Hines Page.

Though considering the chaotic state of all China during 1927, the amount of foreign trade is quite remarkable. The principal loss occurred at Shanghai, where the decrease was 7,025,000 taels, more than three-fourths of the total decrease. This loss, analysis indicates, has been suffered chiefly by British traders, the American trade holding fairly even. The port of Tientsin, on the other hand, registered an increase of 920,000 taels over 1926, directly attributable to the fact that this area has been comparatively free from civil wars. The Japanese port of Dairen in Manchurh also shows an increase of 341,000 taels.

Foreign Loans Met

to meet the foreign loan and indemnity obligations secured on the customs. But for the second year in succession the revenues were insufficient to meet the redemption payments on some of the domestic loans, which are now two years in arrears. The cost of foreign loans and obligations was 60,611,000 taels, and when this is compared with the total revenue of 68,687,000 taels, it may be seen that the customs surplus is not great. Various war lords are accustomed to extort loans from Chinese banks on the customs surplus, and this year the loans thus obtained were considerably in excess of the actual surplus.

Exerbitant Taxes

Exorbitant Taxes Meanwhile, government finances both in Peking and Nanking, as well as in the provincial capitals, have gone from bad to worse. There has been a steady succession of finance ministers in Peking, each of whom has resigned after a short term of office. Taxes have been placed on every conceivable class of trade, and industries in Peking and Manchuria, as well as in Shantung, have been taxed almost out of existence. Peking's famous rug industry, for example, is almost at a standstill due to exerbitant taxation. Reports of precisely the same condition came

"Plimsoll, who represented Derby in Parliament, retired in 1880, but up to his passing in 1898 he remained a very active lobbyist for good causes. In the early nineties Plimsoll got a bill for the inspection of ships' provisions introduced in the House of Commons by George Howell, a Labor man. He moved this bill day after day and eventually got a second reading for it. Then came the time in the session when the Government announced what bills they would be unable to proceed with. Among those to be dropped was Plimsoll's bill.

As soon as he heard the news,

LONDON—A very important tin question, the effect on output of the new dredges which are now coming into use in Malaya, was answered or forecasted authoritatively, for the first time, by Mr. King, chairman of the Malaya, Sigmosa Prospecting the Malaya Siamese Prospecting Company. He was speaking at the annual meeting at Penang. It had been estimated by many engineers a year or so back that when these got in full work 1500 tons per month would be added to the tin output, which would have affected the tin po-

Mr. King, after a very careful investigation, considers that, allowing the fact that these are being used on ground formerly worked by be about 600 tons per month. The Chinese-owned mines are, however, dropping in output heavily, about 30 per cent in the last few years. The tin output in China itself is said to be at present also only 4000 tons instead of the normal 8000 tons. Mr. King, therefore, thinks that the new dredgers will not add much to the world's total tin output as it stands today except to make up for falling supplies from other sources.

see the little chalky lane through which we approached our hill. Our eyes follow its irregular course along the hillside till they are arrested suddenly by a broad white road cutting across the checkerboard of fields and meadows with a striking directness—as if some giant engineer had ruled it. Beyond the road the sunshine is glinting on a stretch of water—a willow-bordered canal. A faint trail of smoke shows us where the train has recently passed, the only sign of activity on this still June afternoon. It is a link up the villages at the foot of the numerous lanes that highest of clouds floating lasily in a blue sky, and a sgatile gorse-scented breese which is strong enough at the height of 1000 feet to set our map on the ground and pulls one of the compass we are, soon settled in position and our map on the ground before us is weighted at the corners with little piles of the flints that that the roads as it is unfolded through map and scenery.

down the hillside are grateful for the wisdom of their leader in ordering them to take the Upper Way. Earlier in the day some of the younger, less experienced travelers had wanted to follow the shorter Lower Icknield Way which they had frequented in summer. But autumn rains had churned the clay into a sticky mud, well-nigh impassable, and wolves, ranged in the thick forest which covered the vale and approached close to the track in many places, so that it was no place in which to be overtaken by darkness.

So these pilgrims make their way along the slippery chaik slopes of the downs, each with his pack on his back and a stout blackthorn stick to help his stops. What may be in those mysterious packs? we ask ourselves—and just as this question springs into our minds our travelers come suddenly upon another band, sathered round the grateful radiance of a huge free. As they amerge from the darkness into the flekering free in the flekering free in the flekering free in the flekering free Whence came these delicate, sliken fabrics which look so strangely out of place against the uncouth garb of the traders? The brilliant purple and red hues strike a strange note in this country of soft green grass and misty skies. As we look at them we see visions of far-away cities basking in golden sunshine on the shores of the bluest of seas, we see stately long-cared galleys laden with precious cargoes making their way over the seas to this little-known semistre the merchandise is carried across the merchandise is carried across the island to the courts of the tribal kings to adorn the ladies of their households; while back to the Mediterranean speed the galleys with their load of Cornish tin, urged on by the unceasing labor of the galley slaves.

Patches of light and shade chase each other in the vale as the clouds drift across the summer sky. Suddenly the sunlight is caught and reflected back to us in a bright, metallic glitter. As we strive to discover its source our eyes light upon a cavalcade of horses and men marching along the straight, dusty road and once again the sunlight flashes from the shining helmets of the Legionnaires. The Quest for Beauty in the Educational Process

HE present is frequently referred to as the Age of Jazz. That this may be the fact does not in the least prevent the process of education from marching on unmoved, in its quest for beauty. Jazz is a word lending itself more readily to discussion than to definition.
While we may not define it, however, we know what it is. Obviously it is transposed accent. It abbreviates the normal and primary and emphasizes the abnormal and secondary. In the very outlawry of this matter lies its seeming fascination. This characteristic of present-day tendency does not necessarily confine itself to music. It may be said to permeate much of the "ultra" art of the day and to youth can refute its reputation for reflected in that sort of living impatience long enough, it will ever which is continually in pursuit of be found that the test of repetition separates the good and permanent from the impure and temporary. Who can name off-hand the so-called the ubiquitous but elusive "thrill." Let us then trace the silver thread popular song" of a year ago today? or even of six months ago? On the other hand, who can ever forget, say, "The Song of the Volga Boatmen"? To concentrate within a small span the experience of the repetition test, the experience of the repetition test, play to a class twice a day for two months the first movement of Tchaikovsky's Sixth Symphonf and one of the latest "Blues." Long before the two months' period is over the story will have told itself. No "sermonising" on the part of the teacher will be necessary.

Suppose instead of saying to our students, "This is good music, you must like it," or "This is had music, you must not like it," we say, "Listen to this. You are to make your own decisions." And an opportunity must be given them to really listen. Unhurried, thoughtful listening is forever assential. After such listening the student should be prepared to make one of three prepared to make one of three statements. "I like it" or "I do not like it" or "I do not know whether I like it or not." He should then ask himself another, "Would I like it more or less or be more certain about it on repeated hearings?" We are back again, you see, to the test of repetition. The answer is that the real and beautiful can be lived with and the spurious and tawdry cannot. Under these conditions the classroom becomes a laboratory for the separation of the gold from the dross and the supply of laboratory material should be abundant. At least half a dozen compositions should be constantly on the boards. undergoing the repetition test, prior to being retained or discarded. This procedure affords a considerable degree of interest to the students, who not infrequently bring to the classroom some composition from their extra-school experience to sub-

Wordsworth as Spokesman of Tradition

Parties are so universally prevalent as the belief that William Wordsworth is the exalted spekesman of a new and revolutionary decirine. No one before, ashad ever voiced so definitely and completely the praises of nature as guide, teacher and friend to man. No one so emplicitly has bidden us trust intuition and inner promptings as opposed to reason and "medding intellect." Any student of literature and many an intelligent reader will quote you,

Those venerable Dectors saw of old . . .

When, in foriorn and naked chambers cooped and crowded, o'er the ponderous books they hung. . .

When Learning, like a stranger come from far, sounding through Christian lands her trumpet, roused

One impulse from a vernal wood May teach you more of man . . . Than all the sages can.

They will cite that other stansa in the same poem,

And hark! how blithe the throstle sings!

He, too, is no mean preacher:
Come forth into the light of things,
Let Nature be your Teacher.

And this, they tell us, is the core of Wordsworth's whole message, elaborated in splendid lines throughout

It is true that he is the prophet of a new enlargement of horizons, of new insight into the perpetual miracle of this natural world. He does provide a sorely needed vista of experience which cannot be found in books or in the traditions of learning Glighly do we pay him our horizont. ing. Gladly do we pay him our homwhich any genius ever rendered to his fellow men. Nor would we abate one iota of the importance of his unique contribution.

But to see only this vast and disthought. For Wordsworth is not a man of one single belief; much less is he a narrow dogmatist. In that most complete of all autobiographical ocems "The Prelude" he has care-ully reflected many other facets of his faith. No one, for example, has expressed more whole-hearted devotion to the hoary traditions of the university than he. No one more zealously held up the ideal of faithful study during the formative years.

But the fact is that of whatever human conditions, comes had said, asserting dogmatically that book-reviewing is and must be and ought to be criticism, and holding me up to scorn because my little infinitely tender and ineffably gentle, understood the unreality of all that essay was very like a longer article as the dew upon the grass, as the soft is unlike God, and the reality of which I had written ten or fifteen years earlier. In fact, the writer of the retort seemed to suggest that I had been guilty of the high crime and misdemeanor of plagiarizing from myself and that I was thereby defrauding the public. That I had repeated myself was something I could not deny. . . "Anointed with fresh oil"

WRITTEN FOR THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

A BEAUTIFUL signification attached to the word "anointing" upon the flower. In one of her matchingers from the past. In one of its meanings this ancient custom was emblematic of sanctification and of the healing words (Poems, p. 4): consecration to the service of God.
There were also social and sanative "O gentle presence, peace and joy meanings associated with the pure oil used in ancinting. The Psalmist, however, undoubtedly referred to the outpouring of divine qualities upon the consecrated thought when he sang, expectantly, "I shall be anointed with fresh oil." This beautiful sense of freshness and constancy of consecration seems closely correlated with the continuance of God's compassions, as described in the prophet's words, "They are new

While the rite of anointing with material oil has long since fallen into very general disuse, the spiritual meaning implied by it remains to be applied and enjoyed by all; for the receiving of pure spiritual qualities is assuredly possible to the uplifted thought of all who seek God. And the effect of such anointing is discerned in the manifestation the courage, I know the longings of the gentleness and power which characterize the eternal and real. Mrs. Eddy very clearly perceived the spiritual significance of the sacred oil with which alone thought can be truly anointed. In "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 592) she defines it thus: "On. Consecration; charity; gentleness; prayer; heavenly inspiration." This definition shows how universally applicable is spiritual truth, and how truly all may become anointed as 'kings and priests unto God."

The world has long acknowledged the value of such qualities as consecration to any high purpose and charity as an habitual attitude toward one's fellow-men. Many, however, have been more or less doubtful of the efficacy of prayer. And the Two or three months after my lit- quality of gentleness has rarely been the only true power is always char-

Romance of Weaving

A soft rain, drifting asiant before a westerly breeze, and drawing a fuller fragrance from roses in cottage gardens, fell continuously as I sauntered through quaint back: streets, listening to the rattle of the hand-loom, an unfamiliar sound to If there was any enactment many ears, it is familiar enough to aspect of the rooms in which weavers work. The weaver needs a good light, for obvious reasons; a large window, perhaps consisting of several frames placed side by side, is inserted both in the back and front letter, self-repealed by its own ab- ter. Through these windows you may Who am I, so that I should set his master or mistress weaves; an hear the canary sing cheerily while of his taste. A row of weavers' cot-manner and speech—who had known few pleasures for many years, saving those of toil at the loom. I heard of her skill from a third person; her of her skill from a third person; her contentment and patience I could learn from her face. She told me, with a touch of pardonable pride, of the costly silks she had woven in her time—how she had made velvet for a princess and for the coronation of a king. . . . This old weaver in Sudbury would, I am sure, acquiesce in the post's words:

and power;
O Life divine, that owns each waiting hour,
Thou Love that guards the nestling's faitering flight!
Keep Thou my child on upward wing tonight."

Gentleness may, indeed, be proved to be correlated with power in the friction of everyday contacts, when human will meets human will, when dispositions clash, when anxieties becloud the sense of confidence, every morning: great is thy faithwhen important decisions are to be made, when fretfulness threatens to annihilate peace. In all these conditions, gentleness is truly availing because it is a spiritual quality, reflecting divine Mind; it is the opposite of self-will; it co-operates with divine power because it lets God be All in the thought which entertains it. It is an element of the anointing which pours "fresh oil" into the harassed thought and lifts it above worldly vexations into the sunlight of inspiration. Such spiritualized thought sees God as the origin of all true existence, and therefore as the only governing authority. When thought rests in this divine truth, it becomes imbued with the "peace of God, which passeth all understanding," and brings this peace as a healing influence into human affairs.

It is through this consecration of thought and desire to the divine and real that one begins to find his true selfhood as spiritual, as reflecting God, divine Mind. This finding of one's identity as the reflection of God is the prayer that "availeth much." It is the inspiration which communes with God and thereby lifts one above the oppressions of materialism. And the realization of heav-"because of the anointing." The acterized by gentleness. This is Scriptures speak of Christ Jesus as because God, divine Mind, is om- anointed "with the oil of gladness" nipotent; and God's thoughts are above his fellows because he best spiritual good. And he said that all who will may receive the Christ, the perfect idea of spiritual man. This, surely, is the daily anointing with "fresh oil," to be desired above all else. Of this coming to individual consciousness, Mrs. Eddy writes of the Christ-cure in Science and Health (p. 367), "The infinite Truth of the Christ-cure has come to this age through a 'still, small voice, through silent utterances and divine anointing which quicken and in-crease the beneficial effects of Chris-

Shaw Pussies Paris

Bernard Shaw's "Heartbreak House" has been presented in Paris to the general bewilderment of French playgoers. The reviewers confess themselves baffled by a play that tells its story in terms of "abstractions rather than recognizable human characters." Possibly the French producers neglected to print on the program Shaw's notice that on the program Snaws notice that this drama was "composed in the Russian manner." The general aim of G. B. S. was to push along the path opened by Tchekov, presenting a picture of human events that is not explicit in itself, but which allows the audience to build up some sort of image or message of its own with-out hindrance from the author. "Heartbreak House" was difficult for New York audiences, also. One playgoer said of it that he got to enjoy it toward the end, after the numbness induced by the imagistic conversations of the first three acts wore away.

For the Research Department Paramount experts in the various technical departments doubtless go to great lengths to have everything correct in the details of their motion pictures. One wonders if any woman with housekeeping experience had a look at the clothes that Florence Vidor dumps into a steaming kettle in "Doomsday." White and colored clothes go in together. While some sorts of mixtures can thus be boiled together, it isn't done often enough to prevent many a housewife from shuddering to see it in the picture.

Nell Hamilton, who is the timorous guard bemoaning his lot, grown-up Brian, movietones the well-kept the spectators in spasms of known song with fine effect. Victor McLaglen has a few moments in which he registers with his accustomed full-favored ease, and Eulalie put all the guards out of commission and Pat Somerast are also in the spectators in spasms of mirth.

It is in this tower scene that suspense reaches nearly to the snapping point. The mysterious wrecker has put all the guards out of commission and Pat Somerast are also in the second of the spectators in spasms of mirth.

'Mother Machree" is little else than highly sentimentalized, popularized chromo of a trite story, beside which Fox's other recent film treatment of the mother theme, "Four Sons," stands out a masterpiece.

"The Smart Set"

The film of last week at the Capitol Theater was "The Smart Set" with William Haines cavorting about in an even more wise-alecking vein of polite drawing-room humor, which than ever. New Bombay Cinema

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE BOMBAY—A new picture house, the Capitol, has been opened in Bombay. Situated opposite Victoria terminus, the new cinema is the old Gaiety Theater remodeled. The film shown at the opening performance was "The Flag Lieutenant," an all-British production, with orchestra music.

Ireland~ a lovely world apart

Ireland is just nine hours away from London: yet it is a world apart.

From the moment you step on Irish soil, whether you visit the incomparable Killarney, lovely Connemara, the green hills of Donegal—you are in a "different" world. A world of simple gaiety, of friendly greetings in the soft Irish brogue; of little white-washed cabins and the soft fragrance of the Irish air. A lovely land to see and a friendly people whose hearty "God bless you" will linger long in the minds of every visitor. Between England and Ireland the London Midland and Scottish Railway has six different routes.

Houston Oil jumped 9 points, American Linseed 8½, Johns Manville 7, and Union Carbide, Case Threshing, International Match preferred, General Asphalt, American Republics and Warren Bros. climbed 3 to 8 points.

General Motors, which had sold down more than 3 points in the morning, had made up its loss by early afternoon.

Railroad shared share

Railroad shares assumed increasing importance when a broad buying movement developed in some of the southwestern issues. Texas & Pacific climbed 4 points to a new high record for all time at 121½, Wabash advanced more than 3 points to within a small fraction of the year's high and a dozen others, including New York Central, Southern Railway, Atchison, Union Pasific and Southern Pacific advanced a point or two.

The closing was strong. Radio got up to 158 again in the last hour. General Electric and General Asphalt were lup 5, American International 9 and American Linseed 13. Some blocks of independent motors were turned over, including 10,000 Chrysler, coincident with a buige in General Motors to 158. Total sales were near the 4,000,000 mark.

Foreign exchanges opened slightly reactionary, with sterling cables quoted around $4.87%.

Renewed activity in the St. Paul issues featured the otherwise quiet bond market today. The undertone continued firm.

Rapid oversubscription of the two government issues tended to restrict offerings. Sharp falling off in the new financing also was a factor sustaining prices, Announcement was made that only $20,000,000 or so of the New York City subway issues aggregating $52,000,000 remained in the hands of dealers.

Fail to Reflect Stability of Trade in the Raw Material

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Mar. 13— rimary cotton goods markets failed o improve during the last week de-pite the fact that raw cotton mar-ets seem to have a fairly stabilized kets seem to have a fairly stabilized basis.

Not only were gray goods prices irregular and uncertain, but the volume of trading was far from satisfactory.

Statistics announced through the Association of Cotton Textile Merchants, covering better than 90 per cent of the cotton goods production of the country, show that yardage output in February was 30 per cent greater than during a similar period in January, while January production was greater than that of December.

Although February sales increased over those of January, they were only 95 per cent of production, and stocks on hand show an increase of 15,000,000 yards at the close of the month.

Unfilled orders showed a decrease of 9.3 per cent as compared with the close of January, but the January figure was 18.5 per cent lower than that at the close of December.

In the gray goods markets print cloths and other plain constructions made of carded yarns were very little in demand, and trading dropped to the smallest proportions seen for weeks. Prices were nominally unchanged, but in some cases were shaded. Standard 33%-inch 64x50s sold at 7itc spot, whereas March and April delivery contracts were taken generally at 7%c and some as low as 7½c; 80 squares were sold for 11c for spots, but brought only 10%c for late March and 10%c for April delivery.

R. H. White Company Pays a Million Dollar Stock Dividend

A 33 1-3 per cent stock dividend amounting to $1,000,000, in addition to a cash dividend, was voted by the stockholders of the R. H. White Company at the annual meeting.

This substantial distribution of money and stocks, while of wide general interest, is of particular interest to the stockholders, because the latter embrace not only the directors and managers but employees managers, but employees.

The policy of R. H. White Company is that only those who are concerned with the management and daily work of the store can own stock. As a result, this cash dividend, following many similar ones—and this big dividend goes to employees in every branch of the business from thifty, ambitious stock boys, salespeople, and assistants, to buyers and executives—opens the way for a still wider participation in the ownership of the business to those who are ready to take advantage of the opportunity.

The R. H. White Company in recent years has materially increased its real estate holdings so that now, in its sixty-third year of business, it owns more than 70 per cent of the buildings and site on which it has been located As a result, this cash dividend, fol-and site on which it has been located for more than half a century.

The management feels that 1928 will be even bigger than 1927. This is evidenced by a quickening of sales and the increasing desire of the public for new things.

The following table shows the revised Irving Fisher wholesale prical price index of 200 representative commodities from Dun's Review and the relative purchasing power of money for and the increasing desire of the public for new things.

The officers and directors were all re-elected as follows: George B. Johnson. president; Maurice A. McBride, vice-president; Samuel L. Carr, clerk; Arthur J. Kelly, treasurer. Directors: Samuel L. Carr, clerk; Arthur J. Kelly, treasurer. Directors: Samuel L. Carr, clerk; Arthur J. Kelly, treasurer. Directors: Samuel L. Carr, clerk; Arthur J. Kelly, treasurer. Directors: George B. Forty-Year 7% Sinking Fund Gold Bonds

External Loan of 1928

Due February 1, 1968

Guaranteed unconditionally as to principal, interest and sinking fund by the

State of Rio Grande do Sul

Not callable, except for Sinking Fund, prior to February 1, 1933

Prior to February 1, 1933, callable in part for sinking fund only, on any interest date, at 100 and accrued interest; on and after February 1, 1933, callable on 30 days' notice as a whole at any time, or in part on any interest date for sinking fund only, at 100 and accrued interest.

Sinking fund calculated to be sufficient to retire the entire issue at or before maturity.

The President of the State of Rio Grande do Sul and Vice-Mayor of the City of Porto Alegre have furnished to us information as follows:

CITY OF PORTO ALEGRE: City of Porto Alegre, founded 1742, is the capital and first city, both in size and importance, of State of Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil. Property owned by City and privately owned land and buildings, together, are officially valued at more than $65,000,000°, and actual values of latter are considered to be at least twice their official valuation. It is also officially stated that City's total population (City record of 1926) is over 270,000, and that 98% of population is of European descent. The City is sixth largest in United States of Brazil, and eleventh largest in South America.

FINANCES AND CREDIT: For last 25 years, ordinary revenues have in every year shown a surplus over ordinary expenditures, including results of municipal public utility operations, and combined total of ordinary revenues and extraordinary revenues for entire period is in excess of combined total of ordinary expenditures and extraordinary expenditures. This loan will be issued as a direct and general obligation of the City. Total funded debt as of February 1, 1928, together with this loan, amounts to $13,004,073*. There is no record of default on any funded debt obligation, either internal or external, of the City.

GUARANTY: The State of Rio Grande do Sul unconditionally guarantees by endorsement the principal, interest and sinking fund of these Bonds. Rio Grande do Sul is the principal cattle and stock raising state of Brazil and is one of the first three states in manufacturing and in value of imports and exports. The banks of Rio Grande do Sul are the largest in total assets of those of any state of Brazil.

Associated Gas and Electric System

NOTICE TO STOCKHOLDERS

To the Stockholders of

Associated Gas and Electric Company:

You have already received a notice of a meeting of stockholders of the Com-pany on March 12, 1928. We hope to have present at this meeting, either in person or by proxy, as nearly a complete representation of the holders of stock of all classes as can be secured.

While holders of the required number of shares have signified their intention of being present in person or by proxy, and assuring the approval and ratifica-tion of the action of the Board as set forth in the notice sent you March 1st, it course difficult to secure the practically unanimous support and approval which we hope for, from so large a number of stockholders as the 60,000 or thereabouts which the Associated Gas and Electric Company now has.

In order, therefore, to give all stockholders the necessary time and opportunity to return their proxies, the meeting to be held March 12th will be recessed to permit the ratification by those whose proxies are not received until a later date of the action which will be taken at that meeting.

TERMS OF DEBENTURES

The proceed 20 peac Convertible Debentures dated March 1, 1928, will be a high grace, desirable invostment. The present earnings, now available for the payment of interest, are well over twice the amount required, both before and after depreciation. The interest rate, 4½%, is in line with the current trend. The proceeds are to be used mostly to pay off debt carrying 5½% and 6%. interest, which when done will increase the earnings for the Class A and Common

WARRANTS AND CONVERSION PRIVILEGES

The warrant and conversion privileges are very attractive. The 20 shares of Class A stock into which each $1,000 Debenture is to be convertible have shown an aggregate selling price of $1,040 ($52 per share—104% of the principal amount of the Debenture) within the last quarter.

Similarly for those who desire the maximum opportunity for appreciation with a lesser current return, the 16 shares of Class A and the 9 shares of Common Stock (at $22 per share) have shown an aggregate selling price of $1,030 within the same quarter (103% of the principal amount of the Debenture), each compared with the subscription price of not more than 99% (which may be reduced when the matter is finally settled by the Board of Directors after the meeting of stockholders on March 12th).

FURTHER MEETING

It has been suggested that purchasers of these Debentures would prefer to have the optional conversion privileges into Class A Stock or units of Class A and Common Stocks, represented by warrants attached to the Debentures, so that the Debenture holders will not be required to surrender their Debentures in order to secure the conversion privilege, but may, at their option, either sur-render their Debentures in payment for the stock or retain the Debentures and purchase the stock for cash. In this way they would be able to retain their investment in the Debentures and at the same time realize the advantage from the purchase of the stock. This suggestion has such merit that it has been decided to submit it to the stockholders.

A further special meeting of stockholders has therefore been called and will be held on March 22, 1928, at 10 o'clock A. M., at the principal office of the Company, at No. 123 South Cayuga Street, Ithaca, New York, for the purpose of taking such further action as may be necessary, by further amendment of the certificate of incorporation of the Company and otherwise, to permit the attachment of warrants for the purchase of Class A Stock and/or Common Stock of this Company to its securities and the issuance of such stock upon the exercise of such warrants free from any limitation requiring the receipt of any certain aggregate consideration from the issuance of stocks junior thereto.

The preparation and mailing to registered security holders of rights to subscribe to new Debentures will not be delayed pending the meeting of March 22nd.

10% INITIAL PAYMENTS—INSTALLMENTS

In offering the new Debentures for subscription, provision will be made for payment in installments, upon which interest will be allowed at 41/2%. An initial payment of 10% of the principal amount of the Debentures is to be made at the time of subscription.

Further and complete details will be furnished when rights are mailed.

For the fifth successive year, according to a recent statement, the Cunard Line led its competitors in the volume of transatlantic travel handled. Harold P. Borer, general passenger manager, said that the Cunard and associated lines carried 269,167 passengers during 1927. Each type of accommodation showed a satisfactory increase, with a particu-lar trend toward tourist third cabin. Last summer, the seasonal rush to Europe continued well into August and indications point to a long east-bound season again. The Cunard plans to dispatch an average of more than a ship a day during the month of June, with 32 sailings scheduled.

Boston Sallings The North German Lloyd Line will use Boston to an increasing extent as an eastbound port of call during the coming spring and summer season. The steamships Derflinger, Karishruhe, Yorok and Seyditz will sail from that port en route to Gal-way and Bremen, making approxi-mately one departure monthly for the Lloyd Line from Boston during the months April-August inclusive.

But the family is taking no chances To make sure that the household is duly represented one way or another in Illinois' government, Mr. Rich-mond has also filed for the office of auditor of public accounts. Should he be nominated for both offices, he will have to drop out of one race before election. Mrs. Richmond is satisfying herself with running for but one office at a time.

FARMERS INSIST ON SHOALS PLAN

"Muscle Shoals was dedicated to fertilizer production, the money ap-propriated with that understanding, and the biggest cyanamid plant in the world stands there idle. We in-sist that it be put to work. Most of the electric power would be con-sumed in the cyanamid process, it is true. But why be disturbed over the fact? Huge quantities of coal would be consumed by the synthetic process. "The Southeast has a great surplus of potential water power. There is no more need for Muscle Shoals power for general distribution than there is for general distribution of the huge quantities of electric power now used on the Little Tennessee River for aluminum production."

Muscle Shoals Is Called Target of Power 'Trust'

WASHINGTON-Government oper ation of the Muscle Shoals property electric current producing plant is being contested by the great private water-power interests, Robert M. La Follette (R.), Senator from Wisconsin, declared in the Senate, because they are aware that such operation will disprove the claims they make concerning their business. Mr. La Foliette asserted the same "lobby" which prevented the senapower industry, as proposed by Thomas J. Walsh (D.), Senator from Montana, was functioning to defeat government operation of Muscle Shoals as a water-power plant.

He declared the fertilizer phase of the property had been disposed o by the progress of natural science. and that the controversy over Muscle Shoals was not one of fertilizer but

"Power Lobby" Busy

"One of the misrepresentations to which the 'power lobby' has succeed-ed in giving the widest currency is some peculiar manner especially suited to the production of ferti-lizers," Mr. La Follette said. "The fallacy of this claim has been repeatedly exposed by the highest au-thorities and engineers." The power industry, Mr. La Follette contended, fears government operation of Muscle Shoals as a power plant because it would prove on a large scale in the East "what the people of the Pacific coast and Ontario (Can.) already know. the rates charged by the private corporations are "excessively high," that their operating charges are farabove those of public-owned plants. and that the 8 per cent return on capital funds that the utilities claim they require are "needlessly extrava-

Presents Statistics Extensive figures and statistics his exhaustive discussion of the issue to sustain his argument that government operation resulted in appreless than those charged by private companies, Muscle Shoals, he said, located near the heart of the future southern industrial development, would, if opcrated as a government plant, not only greatly assist such economic expansion, but would be a telling and powerful example of what public operation of water-power properties eration of water-power properties could do,

"Muscle Shoals is already a publicly owned power station," he declared, "One hundred and fifty million dollars of the people's money has been invested in the development. It was appropriated with the understanding that the plant should be operated by the Government. The Norris bill accomplishes that purpose, and for the Senate to do otherwise is to do the beckoning of the private power interests."

Must Check Monopoly Mr. La Follette maintained that unless the operations of the power industry were checked that it would "demoralize the electric current business as the oil monopoly did to the oil business."
"A spokesman for the power monopoly said last session, 'I represent an investment of $7,000,000.-00 and we do not propose to let the Government enter the power business," Mr. La Follette said. "The power monopoly makes the issue that Congress may legislate only as the power monopoly dictates. It raises the issue of whether the Government or the power trust is to de-termine the lestiny of the people of the United States. I have been told women. that the power trust has an assured majority of 10 in the Senate to defeat the Norris bill. I trust this is not so, but if it should prove to be so then the people of the United States will attend to the matter."

IN THE LAST ISSUE. A Word a Day

THESE QUESTIONS WERE ANSWERED

"The knowledge of words is the gate of scholarship." By salary we generally refer to the periodical recompense paid to a person as compensation for his services or regular work. The distinction made between wages and salary is usually this; wages denotes the price paid for temporary labor by the day or week; salary implies a fixed sum paid for professional or trained service at longer intervals.

Aspiring From the Cabinet

THE candidacy of Herbert Hoover for the Republican presidential nomination reverses some precedents of American political history. It is now, political observers agree, a case of Hoover against the field. The Secretary of Commerce in President Coolidge's Cabinet is a candidate on a platform of continuing the "Coolidge policies." He figured as presidential timber in 1920, before Mr. Coolidge himself was considered even for the Vice-Presidency, but during his tenure of his Cabinet post he has in no sense been a rival of the President. It has not always happened that a political star of the first magnitude in accepting a Cabinet position has had such harmonious relations with his chief and has later stepped forward as his heirapparent.

When in February, 1845, for example, President Polk offered the Secretaryship of State to Buchanan he made this stipulation: "Should any member of my Cabinet become a candidate for the Presidency or Vice-Presidency of the United States, it will be expected upon the happening of such an event that he will retire from the Cabinet." Buchanan accepted the office and said that if he was put forward he would retire from his Cabinet post unless the President should desire him to remain. More recent presidents have apparently made no such stipulation. They have been certain that as presidents they could so overshadow their secretaries that renomination would be assured. The more frequent difficulty has been with respect to a defeated rival not showing unswerving loyalty in the Cabinet.

Thus after the election of 1860 Lincoln made William H. Seward Secretary of State and Salmon P. Chase Secretary of the Treasury. Both had been candidates against him in the Chicago convention. Their friends were among the bitter critics of Lincoln's first Administration. Chase, indeed, resigned in order to become didate for the Presidency in 1864. President Garfield encountered similar difficulties with respect to James G. Blaine, whom he made his Secretary of State. Blaine, even though in the Cabinet, made continued attempts to punish for was Benjamin Harrison more successful in his policy of placing the defeated rival in his Cabinet. Blaine was Harrison's Secretary of State as well, and was a candidate against Harrison at the Minneapolis convention of 1892. He retired from Harrison's Cabinet only after his attempts to wrest the nomination from his chief had become a subject of public criticism. President Wilson, who made W. J. Bryan his Secretary of State, had no such problem. Indeed, President Wilson's insistence upon being his own Secretary of State led to Secretary Bryan's resignation midway in the first Administration. Secretary Hoover, a candidate for the Presidency in 1920, entered President Harding's Cabinet the following year. He continued in President Coolidge's Cabinet in 1925. He has never been a rival. His loyalty has been unquestioned. As a member of the Cabinet, he has contradicted the precedents of American political history which have been cited.

The Highway Holds Its Own

ESPITE all that aviation is accomplishing in regard to transportation progress, and with the railroads penetrating further and further into regions formerly inaccessible, it is indisputable that the highway of old is more than holding its own. Indeed, the highway thus not only remains the handmaid of civilization, but often acts as the advance agent for a great deal that has gone to benefit the world at large.

It is for the reason that much depends on good roads and the maintenance of these avenues of communication that the Second Pan-American Conference on Highways, to be held in Rio de Janeiro the coming July, assumes an importance perhaps little understood except by those directly concerned in extending and improving road construction. The resolution passed by the United States Senate, requesting President Coolidge to invite the International Association of Road Congresses to meet in Washington for its sixth convention, will, if accepted, bring representatives of forty-five nations together for the discussion of ways and means whereby the public thoroughfare can be made to serve even better than in the past.

In connection with the forthcoming Pan-American Conference, it may be recalled that the coming of the motorcar has proved the chief incentive for road development. Throughout South and Central America, as well as in Mexico, new road building is one of the chief concerns of the governments. As an example, Salvador, in fulfillment of the resolution of the First Pan-American Highway Conference, held First Pan-American Highway Conference, held in October, 1925, in Buenos Aires, to celebrate October 5 as Good Roads Day, on that date opened the new roads built during 1927. In Bolivia, the Ministry of Public Works has divided its construction program into two classes—public and private. Honduras and Nicaragua are both making considerable progress with new road construction, and in Mexico the Acapulco Highway, opened last November, in connecting the capital with other leading cities and opening up a country noted for scenic beauty will assist the Government's purpose to attract tourists. The Brasilian Touring Society has done a great deal to advance road building in that country and sponsors anything that can aid in facilitating travel over the highways. Not only as leading out from the capital at Rio de Janeiro, but from such other cities of prominence as Sac Paulo, Santos and Bahia, new roads have furthered business and pleasure traveling. As for urban street traffic, the Brasilian capital possesses in the Avenida Beira Mar a famous avenue circling the water front and constituting avenue circling the water front and constituting one of the most attractive thoroughfares in either the New World or the Old.

Australia's Tropical Lands

WHILE the Australian Commonwealth is making good headway under the new status it has slowly been achieving since the last Imperial Conference, many of its old problems still seem to linger in the infantile stage. One of these, for example, is the development of tropical Australia.

That part of the Commonwealth known as the Northern Territory, as well as the immense areas of northwestern Australia, is increasingly demanding the attention of the Federal Government, and there can be no doubt that, if the Nation is to go forward as a whole, it must raise this land out of its barrenness by intelligently developing the rich resources it is known to contain. To the query, Why not develop the more fertile southlands to a fuller extent before tackling the difficulties of northern development, the answer has been given that Australians must justify their holdings not tomorrow, but today, as others may rightly by arbitration or acquisition claim them for their own.

The short history of Australia's attempts to grapple with the problems involved in the territorial development of its northern tropics has so far been hampered by much criticism of such efforts. Indeed, no appreciable headway has in consequence been made in the rehabilitation of this vast land of more than 500,000 square miles, whose population is only between three and four thousand whites, and whose capital, Port Darwin, is the only town in the Northern Territory. Its area is about that of Alaska, or of Germany, Italy and France combined. Port Darwin has seen difficult times and was once, in 1919, under mob rule when the Territory's Administration was being accused of incompetency. As far as the Negro population is concerned, the eminent anthropologist and biologist, Sir Baldwin Spencer, declared recently that the aborigines there numbered about 30,000 and were in the process of becoming rapidly extinct. These declarations of Sir Baldwin, by the way, helped to rouse Australian public opinion on the plight of the natives.

Lately the remarks of one, Robert I. D. Mallan, who has spent eighteen years in the Northern Territory and who is the senior barrister and practicing solicitor at Port Darwin, have been attracting the attention of Australians because he is believed to be an authority on the subject. Mr. Mallan seems doubtful upon the success of the scheme of the Federal Government, which has lately appointed three commissioners for a term of five years to administer and report upon the Territory. The results of this step, he thinks, will be no better than those which have emanated from other similar bodies. While sixty miles of railway have been built to the southward, the rate of construction is so slow that many years, thinks Mr. Mallan, will elapse before the northern country is linked with the settled parts in the south

Now that the commission of three has been appointed, however, Australians will undoubtedly follow interestedly their efforts to tackle a question that is of vital importance to the well-being of the whole Commonwealth of Australia.

Normal Employment

THE call by Congress for a report on the condition of employment caused no surprise in political circles. The Senate, which was also the source of this resolution, has been giving much time to the consideration of requests for special investigations. In the present instance, however, it is anticipated that the Department of Labor will be in sympathy with the purpose of the investigation. James J. Davis, Secretary of Labor, has already had quite a little to say on the subject. The records of the Department of Labor have rather consistently covered the alleged unemployment situation. The monthly reports from that department have indicated that there has been a constant decline in the number of employed since 1923 although it must be confessed that the decline has been gradual. On the other hand the decline in employment has kept pace with the decline in the cost of living, the increase in machinization of work, and the improved general economic situation. These tendencies, it is true, have been relative, and it might as well be acknowledged that all sorts of statistics are possible of assemblage. As a matter of fact the Department of Labor itself last summer revised its labor indices because of the change in the nature of industry. New industries, modern conditions of employment and changed outlooks by Labor have made this necessary.

According to the views expressed by an independent labor organization the unemployed in the United States today total some 3,000,000. Senator Wagner of New York, the author of the resolution adopted by the United States Senate, declared that the unemployed number some 4,000,000. Even before the resolution was called up for consideration the Department of Labor had been gathering statistics on the subject. Generally speaking, the unemployment situation may be summarized as follows: One million constitute a "normal" unemployment. One-third of the present estimated unemployed, and this includes many of the men formerly working in the coal fields where an important strike is in progress, have sought employment in other industries. New industries like radio, sviation, etc., have absorbed many of them. Probably another third have found it desirable to retire by preference, they having decided that the generally improved economic situation is such as not to require their laboring further.

. Figures now compiled show that the employment at present is slightly below what it was this time last year, and last year it was below what it was in 1926. But it is agreed that 1926 was a banner year. The figures show, nevertheless, that the decline this year as from month to month has been at a lower rate than last year. The seasonal slack, therefore, has been less perceptible. From this it is concluded that business activity is generally quickening at a rate more noticeable than it was this time last year. While a reasonable expectation might be a continuation of this improvement, at least it does indicate that there has been a turn for the better. The maintenance of a cost of living at the present index, coupled with a seasonable increase in employment, would result in a notable improvement in the condition of labor. It is reasonable therefore to conclude that employment is on the upgrade, as Mr. Davis asserts, and that unemployment had never reached a point to cause national apprehension.

Trustee and Custodian

NO ONE has done more, perhaps, than Rodman Wanamaker, successor to the vast estates of John Wanamaker, in dispelling the belief that those who inherit or accumulate large fortunes are enemies of society. But even the example which he set is less conspicuous by contrast than it would have been a generation ago. He was not a pioneer in the undertaking to prove that vast wealth can be so utilized as to adapt it to something better than the gratification of selfish desires. His contribution was, however, a valuable one, supplementing and furthering a constructive educational movement which has done much in reversing, even if it has not actually destroyed.

a too prevalent popular prejudice. Those who have been foremost in movements actuated by the understanding that the possessors of large fortunes stand in the relation of trustees or custodians, the executors of an implied trust of which those who have aided, directly or indirectly, in the production of wealth are the rightful beneficiaries, seem to have gained the realization that true satisfaction and enjoyment come only through an unselfish administration of that trust. This does not impose the duty to give promiscuously or to scatter profligately. It demands, rather, a devotion to the public welfare, attention to constructive enterprises in aid of those who, from lack of opportunity or because of adverse circumstances, are unable to help themselves. There are always many of these. Those who become genuine benefactors are the men and women who make available the opportunities for self-support and moral and material advancement which are appreciated and utilized by the worthy and deserving.

Ring Out, Merry Bells

KY concerts are no longer a novelty. They may be heard from many a belfry on a summer's evening in different parts of the world. But seldom have they attained the distinction achieved at a concert at Croydon recently when 2000 bell ringers, veterans among them drawn from the remotest corners of England, listened to the music of some massive castings, one bell alone, made for a great New York carillon, weighing eighteen and one-quarter tons. It was not only a concert of "sky' music, but also an exhibition of what has been achieved by one of the great bell foundry towns Skill in tuning, harmonizing and making has done much to produce in bells a mellowness equaling that of the ancient carillons of Europe. Yet there is something more than music in bells. Had it not been so, the language of the chimes would have been lost on Toby Veck and a great story might have gone into the discard. Can anyone imagine "The Chimes' without the clear, vivid language of the bells? Nor would there have been a Whittington of fable, for Dick was intent on severing his apprenticeship and was on his way out of London when he seemed to hear the bells, Bow Bells, ring out:

Turn again Whit-ting-ton, Lord Mayor of Lon-don.

The language of bells is intelligible to those who listen to the voice of the steeple. It is a language of its own, as is the language of flowers, sweet, inspiring, carried on the wind. It is a language of dreams, of hopes, enhanced by soft echoes-for what is resonance but echo in another form? Harsh words are not within its vocabulary, nor strife, nor striving. The poet understands it, because it exalts and conjures up noble thoughts. It speaks soothing words to the distressed, brings consolation to the lonely, and cheer to those who understand its merry play with the weathercock.

Hail to the promise of a greater day for bells, which the festival at Croydon signifies!

Editorial Notes

The Rev. William Boyd, author of the tune "Pentecost," to which the hymn "Fight the Good Fight With All Thy Might" is commonly sung, who has just passed on in London at the age of eighty-three years, strangely enough did not write the tune for the words with which it is so closely associated. Indeed, the tune which made Mr. Boyd so well known throughout the Christian world was composed at the request of Baring Gould, who desired it for a Yorkshire miners' religious service. It was Sir Arthur Sullivan, it is said, who actually fitted the vicar's music to the present words, thus producing a version which has become universally beloved.

The Secretary of State for New Hampshire has decided to let whoever holds the secretaryship in 1933 find an answer to the question of when the commissions of the seventy-five notaries public and justices of the peace which were given out Feb. 29, 1928, "for five years from this date," will expire. Suppose, however, someone should challenge the validity of the commissions on the ground that there is no such thing as "five years" from that date?

Crossing a Balkan Boundary

HERE we are at General Todoroff! No, that is not a typographical error nor a grammatical mistuke, for the general is not a person but a small station on a little railroad in the southwest corner of Bulgaria. Yesterday morning I left Baloniki, the largest port on the Ægean Sea and one of the largest in Greece, and started north toward Serbia. Later we turned due east and passed along the edge of Lake Doiran, clean and cool and quiet, and all oblivious of the stern boundary line that has made half of its shiny blue waters Greek and half Serb. Across the lake we see a high peak on which three boundaries meet and on which Greek, Bulgarian and Serb sentinels hourly watch one another. For this is Macedonia, and Macedonia is a well-watched land.

We leave Lake Doiran and pass eastward beside the mountain range along the top of which, as along the peak of a steep-roofed house, runs the Greece-Bulgarian frontier. As we look sharply, we see that the horizon is beaded by a line of little white houses, two or three miles apart. On the other side of the crest there must be sim-

It is there that hundreds of Greek boys face hundred of Bulgarian boys all with bared bayonets; together they form a double line of constantly moving sentries who form a double line of constantly moving sentries who patrol that lonely ridge through rain and snow, through the darkness of night and noonday heat, each in the name of a flag. Every few weeks the squads are changed and new groups of khaki-clad Greek peasants go up the mountain to face new groups of Bulgarian villagers clothed in gray, all determined to defend themselves from

We pass a large number of small white villages, composed of little square houses arranged in as orderly a manner as the jars in a well-kept pantry. Every village has its main street and a few side streets, a well or more, a school and a village square. In all Europe there are no other such orderly rows of peasant houses, for an ordinary village is like an old, old farm.

Its streets are like old paths and they wind about gullies and brooks and banks and bowlders, its houses are both new and old, large and small, trim and "sprawly," while great gnarled trees, with a history, rule over the streets and squares, and awkward, clumsy mills beat homemade cloth or grind out coarse, dark flour in cool, secluded, spray-covered nooks. But these white villages are all new, made to order, 1500 in number, created by an expert commission to shelter a million Greek refugee from Asia Minor.

We reach the station of an old town, snuggling under a gigantic rock, which towers up over the timid plain like a bold Gibraltar, and I wiggle my way out of the crowded car. The train whistles and puffs and goes on its way to Constantinople and cool mosques and leisurely men who

I take the fourth and last place in a little carriage and am soon passing along the main street of another little white village on my way into town. Two years ago all of the houses and gardens in this village were exactly alike, but already you see some yards with flowers, some rooms with lace curtains, some new porches and sidewalks and brightly painted windows, and you know who's who in this little settlement of people who are beginning anew in a land as far from their ancient homes as was Babylon from Jerusalem.

We barely pass out of the village before we reach the town. It is ten miles from the Bulgarian border. After much unpleasant bargaining I engage a Ford for the trip. Then I hurry on foot to the post or officers' barracks a mile away. It is just past noon and a very inauspicious hour to ask a Near Eastern officer to put his stamp on your passport.

As I come into the yard of the first of a row of little houses, strung along a brook, I meet the young wife of the officer in charge. She confirms my worst apprehen-sions. Her husband is taking his nap and must not be disturbed. She tells me to come back at 3 o'clock. I show by my distressed look that such a delay would be calamitous, and the lady sends me to the house of a subordinate under the escort of a little Greek maid as charming as her Greek mistress. I secure my visa and hurry back to the waiting Ford.

As we leave the town we stop at a guardhouse along the road and I show my passport to a group of well-bayoneted soldiers. Then we rattle along over poor roads up the Struma valley, amid quiet, friendly hills to the border. There I am met by a whole company of soldiers. I answer many questions about myself and my wife, and

We go over to a little inn not far away and wait for the man to come with his horses. Across the road is a tiny flour mill, busily whirring and clicking; its proprietor, whom they call "the American," soon comes over to see us. He has spent five years in the United States and is glad to hear some American again. We sit there in the shade of the inn, the miller, the innkeeper, the passport man, the guard, my prospective fellow traveler and others who happened along.

We are near one of the wildest boundaries of the wild Balkans, and the talk is of boundaries. The men are all

Balkans, and the talk is of boundaries. The men are all refugees, and as they look past the bridge they see the fields and villages from which they have been driven and they say unfriendly things of the long-bayoneted Greeks

Soon two horses and their owner appear. I present my request, offer my dollar and receive a satisfactory answer. My Bulgarian companion and I climb into the pack saddles, onto which our baggage has been tied; I gather my little typewriter in my arms and we start for the railroad station ten miles away.

It is the delightful evening of a pleasant day. Huge mountains tower in the distance on every side. My fellow traveler tells me of himself and family, as all Bulgarians like to do. Our driver, who walks along beside us urging the horses ahead, tells us of his family. He is one of Europe's heroic villagers. Driven from his home and lands by war, he and his family arrived in the little border village, which he now inhabits, with nothing but the clothes they wore.

Little by little, through long, hungry years, during which he often worked for 10 cents a day, he and his wife managed to save a little money and to get a little land, and a few animals, so his bread is assured and he is very happy, hoping only that there may be no more wars. + + +

We travel a long time, talking and looking at the hills. The sun goes down and darkness comes on. We pass through a wretched little village inhabited only by nomad shepherds, and a little later stop before a tiny railroad station. No hotel, no restaurant, no waiting room. Our driver receives his money and starts back home. I walk back to the shepherd village and find some bread and

On returning to the station I find my companion lying beside his baggage on the ground. He has settled himself for the night. I look about and discover a dozen enormous sacks of cotton piled together. Then I run over to tell my Bulgarian friend the good news; we gather up our baggage, and gratefully stretch out under the stars on beds as soft as many a king has slept on. All about us are gray oxen and black buffaloes, which in the morning will cross the boundary on their way to the market at Saloniki. Their keepers are sleeping or squatting about little camp fires. After a while the lights in the station go out. The animals can no longer be heard. The camp fires glow but faintly. Then all is forgotten until we hear a vehement whistling and rumbling. It is 3 o'clock in the morning and the tiny train has come to take us to Sofia.

It is like a toy train, with benches running along the sides of the tiny cars. We crowd sleepily in and say good-by to General Todoroff. We ramble along at less than ten miles an hour, stopping long at all the stations so as not to get ahead of schedule. Our car is packed and we all take turns at standing up. The young lady with the bobbed hair, the schoolteacher, the priest, the police-man, the "grandma," and the little baby all form a friendly company. We share our fruit and bread with one another, talk until we are tired, nod off to sleep and fall against one another, until at last we reach Sofia and part from each other as folks who have been on a camping trip.

LONDON MUCH interest is being manifested by the public in the diorama of the Canadian ranch owned by the Prince of Wales in Alberta. It has been on exhibi-tion at the British Industries Fair and will find a permanent home in the Canadian section of the Imperial Institute. The Prince followed the process of its painting and made a great many suggestions for its completeness and improvement. It shows the Prince, accompanied by Prof. W. L. The by-elections that have recently been taking place in England have witnessed the introduction of a new device that, however acceptable it may be to politicians and campaign managers, will fill others with alarm. The campaign speeches made at a central meeting are now being relayed, by means of amplifiers and microphones, to other meetings at almost any distance. In a speech delivered to 9000 people at Lancaster by Mr. Lloyd George, his remarks were also heard by a meeting of 6000 at Morecambe. The transmission was perfect, with no buzzing or such interruptions as occasionally accompany wireless programs, and only the absence of the speaker in person at Morecambe distinguished one meeting from the other. It is expected that at the next general election, facilities will be arranged so that leading speakers like the Prime Minister may address the entire nation from such a center as the Albert Hall. + + +

A curious coincidence has come to light in connection with the publication by the Liberal Party of its long-expected Industrial Report, on which a distinguished group of experts have been working for eighteen months. One paragraph in it says:

It is a fallacy to assume that the national wealth is more truly increased if the fruits of British savings embodied in British labor are used to embellish the city of Rio de Janeiro than if they are employed to demolish the slums of South London or to build motor-roads through the Mid-

Rio was, of course, merely used as an example, because no loan of that city has been issued in London since 1912. On the very day the report was issued, however, Rio raised a large loan in New York and the bankers in charge of it allotted $3,000,000 to their London connections. So the Liberals, whose leader, Mr. Lloyd George, has just returned from a holiday spent in Rio, were much more accurate than they had intended to be in using that beautiful metropolis to illustrate their meaning.

The movement for a brighter London has received unexpected assistance from one of the big wireless tele-graph companies. Its messenger boys are now illuminated, and the first meeting with one, especially if it takes place on a dark day in one of the narrow, shadowy byways of the financial district, is rather startling. The boys wear caps into which have been set devices employing the new reflecting signs. These signs reflect light against a mirror on which is printed the company's name, and the result is extremely effective. The youngsters who have been thus accoutered have thoroughly enjoyed the surprised looks which have greeted them on their errands around London, but have been careful to remain apparently unaware of the attention they have attracted and have successfully maintained the sang froid which seems to be an unshat-terable part of their professional equipment.

The chair on which Charles I is believed to have sat in Westminster Hall when he was tried in 1649 has been found in the village of Moreton-in-Marsh, Gloucestershire, and is likely to be given a permanent home in the Victoria and Albert Museum, South Kensington. "The chair," said an official of the museum, "is reported to have very interesting and important historical associative words and important historical associative words. tions. It was the one actually used by King Charles I at his trial. We have made careful inquiries and are quite satisfied as to the authenticity of the story."

A curious literary coincidence has been described in a letter from Viscountess Grey of Fallodon. Writing to a London editor she says:

London editor she says:

Some lines, on a sundial, were given me by a friend, before I knew their author, copied from his sundial. I found they were not a sonnet in that they numbered thirteen lines, and I amused myself by composing a fourteenth line, which I placed fifth in the octave, and so made it complete. Years later, when my Common-Place Book was to be published, I wrote for their author's permission for their inclusion, and told him what I had done. In his reply he wrote that originally there had been fourteen lines, but the stonecutter in engraving the sundial had dropped one out, and mistakes in stone are not easily remedied. "But now that it is to be printed," he added, "here is the line; please insert it." Then I found the original line belonged not only where I had placed my line, but, with the exception of one word, they were identical.

+ + + Nobody looking at the imposing building in Regent Street which houses the well-known London restaurant, the Café Royal, would guess from what humble begin-nings it started. When it was opened recently after its rebuilding, Lord Birkenhead stated that it was launched originally in 1865 by two simple Burgundy peasants, grandparents of the present managing director. Their capital consisted of £5, and that was borrowed. And they did not feel really secure until they had established themselves with £100 in hand!

+ + + Bird and game sanctuaries have become familiar in many countries, especially in England, the United States, and Canada. It is now proposed to establish a fish sanctuary in the shallow waters off the coast of England, where fishing will be permanently prohibited. The Minwhere against will be permanently prohibited. The Minister of Agriculture is to receive a deputation from the Cinque Ports with the object of securing governmental co-operation in the work. The steady operation of steam trawlers in the Channel has unquestionably made great inroads on the supply of fish. As yet little is known of the habits of fish, as compared with birds and wild animals, and pisciculturists attach great importance to such sanctuaries as the one proposed because of the opporsanctuaries as the one proposed, because of the oppor-tunity it would afford to study the habits of fish in waters where their normal movements are not disturbed by the constant harrying of fishermen.
